Women and Modern Chinese History

This course examines the experiences of Chinese women in the twentieth century, and considers how writers, scholars and politicians (often male, sometimes foreign) have represented women’s experiences for their own political and social agendas. At the same time, we will also look at the ways in which female writers have written about women’s issues and women’s lives during this period.

Students will develop critical reading and writing skills while also engaging in civil discussion. They will practice the art of peer review through the provision of constructive and penetrating feedback. And they will attain greater facility at responding to feedback through repeated engagement with peer and faculty comments on their work.

Grading:

- Generative Questions: 20%
- Class Participation: 30%
- Final Paper (12-15 pp): 30%
- Interim assignments for final paper (bibliography 5%, primary source presentation, 5%, final presentation 10%): 20%

The following books are available from the university bookstore: https://tinyurl.com/JHU-F20-100-424-01.

- Emily Honig, Sisters and Strangers
- Wang Zheng, Women and the Chinese Enlightenment
- Xiao Hong, Field of Life and Death and Tales from the Hulan River
- Helen Young, Choosing Revolution
- Gail Hershatter, The Gender of Memory

The class participation grade will be based on the students’ preparation for and contribution to class discussion. This class is a seminar and I expect students to provide substantial content. To that end, students should complete the assigned readings before scheduled class meetings. A student’s class participation will be evaluated not according to the amount of talking that student does, but rather according to whether that student contributes thoughtfully and constructively, based on careful consideration of the class readings. Students (as noted below) will prepare questions and comments about the reading for discussion in class.
Each week, students are expected to produce “generative questions” that they feel ought to be addressed by their classmates during class (in other words, these should be questions that generate discussion—not factual questions for the professor). These should be submitted by 10 am on Wednesdays.

A good question will demonstrate thoughtful engagement with the reading and strong preparation for discussion. It should reference and reflect engagement and familiarity with the assigned material. A rubric can be found under “course content” on Blackboard. We have 12 weeks with assigned reading. I will count the 10 highest graded “generative questions” toward the final grade and will drop the 2 lowest grades.

 In thinking about the reading (and taking notes on it!), it is always a good idea to identify whether a particular reading is a primary or secondary source. If the reading is a primary source, consider its genre and whether it is prescriptive or descriptive. If the assigned reading is an academic article or monograph, it is always a good idea to identify the author's thesis or main idea in relation to the broader themes of the class.

This website explains a useful technique for writing and revision https://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/resource/635/01/

 Each student will complete an original paper of approximately 12 pp. grounded in the close reading and analysis of primary sources. To that end, each student is expected to identify an issue related to women in modern China and either locate it in a specific historical moment—or track that issue or concept as it changed (or did not change) over time. Students may draw upon the assigned primary sources from this class but should also locate and select additional sources independently. Primary sources may include visual images, films, fiction, historical documents, letters, speeches, essays, etc.

Possible themes for the final paper include (but are not limited to) topics that connect to the following concepts and categories: work, political rights, family, marriage, free-love, sexuality, chastity, decadence, beauty, courtesans/prostitutes/sex workers, motherhood, “zhong nan qing nú” (i.e. to value sons more than daughters), writing/writer, model (as in ideal type), New Woman, Modern Girl, victim, militant, foot-binding, consumer, producer, professional, activist, independent personhood, eating/speaking bitterness, suicide, women’s education, iron girls, Confucianism or “tradition”, “Women Hold Up Half the Sky,” International Women’s Day. There will be several interim assignments related to this paper requiring meetings with Professor Meyer-Fong and the peer review of written and oral presentations.

This class does not assume any familiarity with Chinese history or Chinese language. There are no specific prerequisites. Students without any background in Chinese studies may find it helpful to consult a textbook or documentary film for background information. To that end, I have asked the bookstore to order Jonathan Spence’s Search for Modern China as a recommended text. Alternatively, you may wish to watch the

 All final papers should be submitted via the Turnitin Portal on Blackboard. Unexcused late papers will be penalized 3 points per day (A becomes A-). In cases of illness, emergency, or deadline conflicts please request an extension as early as is feasible.

---

The strength of the university depends on academic and personal integrity. In this course, you must be honest and truthful. Ethical violations include cheating on exams, plagiarism, reuse of assignments, improper use of the Internet and electronic devices, unauthorized collaboration, alteration of graded assignments, forgery and falsification, lying, facilitating academic dishonesty, and unfair competition.

Report any violations you witness to the instructor. You may consult the associate dean of students and/or the chairman of the Ethics Board beforehand. See the guide on “Academic Ethics for Undergraduates” and the Ethics Board web site (http://ethics.jhu.edu) for more information.

---

9.2 Introductory Session: The “Woman Question” and Chinese History

9.9 From Dynasty to Republic—Oppressed Traditional Woman as National Metaphor
Reading:
* “Anti-Footbinding (1900-1910)” in Ebrey, Chinese Civilization: a Sourcebook, pp. 341-344. (note that there is another Ebrey reading on One Child Policy filed with this on e-reserves. Please only read the anti-footbinding material for today’s class!)
* Dorothy Ko, “The Body Inside Out,” Cinderella’s Sisters: A Revisionist History of Footbinding, 38-68
* Margaret Burton, The Education of Women in China. 5-6, 11-51, 194-232.

Background: China in Revolution, Part 1

9.16 “The Woman Question”—Images of Women from the May 4 Period
Reading:
*The debate over Miss Zhao’s Suicide, Women in Republican China: A Sourcebook, 75-88.
*Lu Xun, “Regret for the Past,” and “New Year’s Sacrifice,” in Selected Stories of Lu Xun, 197-215 and 125-143.

This WEEK Meet with Prof. Meyer-Fong in Office Hours to Discuss Paper Topics

9.23 Women and the Chinese Enlightenment

Reading:
Wang Zheng, Women in the Chinese Enlightenment. Read pp. 1-144 and will assigned ONE of the chapters from among Chapters 4-8 (i.e. will introduce their classmates to one of the career women featured in Part 2).

In addition: Choose one of the following short stories:

9.30 New Women and New Media

Required Film: The Goddess (starring Ruan Lingyu)

Reading:
Translations from Ling long (please also read the explanatory material associated with the on-line exhibition)
https://exhibitions.library.columbia.edu/exhibits/show/linglong/about_linglong/woman/contemporary

https://exhibitions.library.columbia.edu/exhibits/show/linglong/about_linglong/did/stars

Recommended (optional) Film:
“The New Woman,”
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=9Q4zhLxCBro&list=PLhA05Qf09xBaz_t_yvZ-Porcj7bui&index=7

10.7 Women and Work in Pre-War Shanghai

Reading:
Emily Honig, Sisters and Strangers: Women in the Shanghai Cotton Mills. (entire)

Optional: *Autobiographical Sketches published in the women’s press during the 1920s and 1930s, Chinese Women through Chinese Eyes, pp. 167-191.

Preliminary bibliography for final paper due in class. See Assignment under “Course Content”

10.14 Women and War

Reading:
Xiao Hong, Field of Life and Death, Goldblatt, trans. (Read all of Field of Life and Death—don’t read Tales of Hulan River)
*Ding Ling, “When I Was in Xia Village” and “New Faith” in Barlow, I Myself am A Woman (pp. 298-315 and 280-297 respectively).

Background: documentary China in Revolution, Part II

10.21 Women and Revolution

Reading: Helen Young, Choosing Revolution. (entire)
*Ding Ling, “Thoughts on March 8” in Myself am a Woman, 316-321.

(Helen Young will ZOOM into class for discussion!!)

10.28 Liberation: Women’s Lives in New China

Reading:

*Gail Hershatter, The Gender of Memory. Because this is a long book, students will all read the introduction and conclusion—and will be assigned to small groups to present individual chapters.

Background: documentary The Mao Years, Part 1.

11.4 The Cultural Revolution (1966-1976)—Model Women vs. Gendered Suffering

Reading:

Required Viewing: The White Haired Girl (A Revolutionary Ballet, AV Reserve—)

Background: documentary The Mao Years, Part II.

Five minute oral presentation interpreting one primary source from your final project. Presentations will be peer reviewed.

11.11 Women in the 1980s

Reading:
Honig and Hershatter, Personal Voices

Required Viewing: Carma Hinton (dir) Small Happiness.
Background: documentary: Born Under the Red Flag

In class slide presentation: Images of Women and Modernity in 1980s Political Posters

11.18 Women and Work in the 1990s and Beyond

Reading:

Fan Yusu, “I am Fan Yusu,” https://www.whatsonweibo.com/fan-yusu-%E6%88%91%E6%98%AF%E8%8C%83%E9%9B%A8%E7%B4%A0-full-translation/

Students exchange draft papers with a classmate for peer comments and submit draft paper to Professor Meyer-Fong for comments. Peer and professorial comments will be returned on 4/29.

11.25 No Class! Thanksgiving Break

12.2 Presentations of Final Papers—ten minute oral presentation (peer reviewed)